Disrupt HR Birmingham 2.0 is a wrap!

DisruptHR is an event series that is sweeping the nation and shaking up the HR world. Visiting cities across not only the UK, but across the globe too. Not exclusively designed for HR professionals, DisruptHR is ideal for leaders hoping for inspiration and advice on how to create a healthy and thriving work culture. It's an opportunity to mingle with other professionals across similar or completely different industries and learn more about hot topics and current HR challenges.

The Birmingham event hosted on 5th September was a roaring success, organised by My Staff Shop, the UK's only employee-owned employee benefit suppliers. Energetic and influential talks were paired with food, drinks and networking to create an opportunity for ticket holders to learn something new and meet contacts. Taking place at The Yard at The Button Factory in Birmingham's cool and contemporary Jewellery Quarter made for the perfect atmosphere for an informative yet relaxed environment.

"We have had a blast! The talks were incredible, the speakers all had something unique to say, and the audience loved it! We have seen great conversations being had, contacts made and even friendships forged. The power of these events is tangible and the Birmingham HR community is incredibly welcoming. We have raised the bar with this one, and look forward to growing the event to help reach more Midlands based businesses over the coming year," explains Verity Gough, Communications Manager at My Staff Shop.

Snappy presentations were delivered with a slide every 15 seconds, giving the talks a dynamic, exciting, and attention-grabbing feel. Presentations last a modest 5 minutes, giving the audience enough time to pick up some tips and ideas without starting to lose interest. A fresh take on long-existing HR issues and frustrations, the speakers deliver their experience and advice with a passion that is bound to motivate any attendee.

The event was co-hosted by Bill Bahman, editor of The HR Gazette and HR Chat podcast, recruitment specialists re:find Interim and Executive Search, with sponsors Octopus Electric Vehicles and Santé Group. With such esteemed speakers, this is really the event to attend if you work in HR or want to learn more about the sector.
